GOOD NEWS OF JOHN C. C. MAYO.

Condition Very Encouraging. Transfusion of Blood Produced Wonderful Effect.

Just before going to press a telephone message from Mrs. John C. C. Mayo at Cincinnati stated that Mr. Mayo is materially improved. His pulse and temperature are normal and his mental condition is good. He has eaten eggs and toast and other light diet. If no further complications develop, his chances for recovery are excellent.

When the NEWS went to press last week the condition of Mr. Mayo was considered almost hopeless. The physicians had just decided to try a transfusion of blood. Tests were made of blood from several men, but that of Mr. Mayo's brother, Washington I. Mayo, was found to most nearly meet the requirements. Dr. Lindeman was called from New York to assist in the transfusion, he being an expert in this work and the inventor of the best device made for the purpose. The operation took place Friday afternoon, with the most encouraging results.

On Sunday his condition began to grow worse and another transfusion was decided upon. It took place Monday at noon. His brother again supplied the blood, and the results were again satisfactory.

The Cincinnati Enquirer of last Saturday gave the following account of the first operation:

The veins of John C. C. Mayo, Kentucky capitalist, are today pulsing with a pint and a half of additional warm, rich blood transfused from the arm of his brother, Washington Mayo.

The transfusion was effected at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon, when the patient's pulse was far below normal and his temperature was 101. Saturday morning at 1 o'clock Dr. Wilkinson, his attending physician, gave out the following bulletin:

"The transfusion was undoubtedly a success, and Mr. Mayo is now resting very well, with a normal pulse and temperature, something he has not experienced in many weeks. The change was perceptible in a few hours."

When it was decided by the specialists that a transfusion was necessary, Washington Mayo, a brother of the patient, who is a large, normal, healthy man, offered himself to the physicians. The pins and a half of blood taken from his veins appeared not to effect him in any way and he stated that he was willing to continue the experiment as long as the physicians would use him.

The following is from the Lexington Leader of last Sunday:

Congressman Bascom C. Slem, of Virginia, a partner with Mr. J. C. C. Mayo in many of his Eastern Kentucky enterprises, arrived in Lexington last night from Cincinnati, bearing with him the most encouraging news that has yet come from the bedside of the Paintsville coal operator.

"You can imagine how we felt," said Mr. Slem. "The doctors told us he had one chance, just one chance, to live. That was in transfusion."

"His stomach has been sound throughout the whole trouble, diuretics have been persistently used to stimulate his kidneys, and his whole system has made splendid efforts to rebuild the broken down tissues and carry away the poisons formed by the obstructions. His blood, however, was not rich enough in red corpuscles to carry on the fight in his weakened condition, and one resource after another of the physicians which at first helped for a day, later strengthened him but an hour."

"Had the blood transfusion failed, Mr. Mayo could not have lived two hours longer. Yesterday he had one chance to recover. Today the doctors said he had every chance. His brother's blood was not selected until the blood of half a dozen men had been tested. Three men came down from Paintsville for the purpose, but Washington Mayo's blood was decided to be the most compatible."

"A new method of transfusing the blood was tried on Mr. Mayo, which was said to be a vast improvement over the old method, which was to connect the veins of the two men by a tube, and pump the blood across. It was done in Mr. Mayo's case, by simply taking the blood from the brother's vein and transfusing it into the patient's with an instrument like a hypodermic syringe. It enabled the doctors to measure accurately the amount transfused, which was the chief advantage claimed."

"The change in Mr. Mayo was almost instantaneous. Before the operation he lay with his mouth open and his eyes staring, gasping for breath and only half conscious of what was going on around him. For weeks he has had only short lucid periods, and his sleep has not been natural. Within an hour after the transfusion his mind completely cleared, and in a perfectly natural way he fell asleep. He was doing so well that it was decided not to make the second transfusion until tomorrow."

"It is almost certain that he will get well if the new fresh blood in his veins can do the great amount of work necessary to repair the ravages that the disease has made, and destroy the poison that has been spread through his system."

Washington Mayo said: "Yes, I could feel the blood coming from me. It lasted about half hour. It only hurt when they started the operation, and after that I didn't feel it."

"I laid down for two or three hours after the operation. I didn't feel like doing it, but the doctors told me to. The first thing I wanted to do was to smoke and the doctors told me to go ahead."

EASTER SERVICES AT LOUISA CHURCHES.

Appropriate Programmes, With Plenty of Good Music.

Easter was a fair day and the churches were well attended, particularly at night. The Sunday Schools observed the day in various appropriate ways, the lesson for April 12th being adapted to the occasion.

M. E. Church South.

At this church the attendance at the morning service was large. The pastor, Rev. B. Martin Keith, preached a strong Easter sermon. Two little daughters of M. E. Haywood were baptized. There was a program of special music appropriate to the occasion and well rendered.

The Sunday School that morning had an attendance of 208, which equals the highest record of the school.

The usual evening service was omitted and a fine concert of vocal and instrumental music was given. The excellence of the concert can be estimated by noting the high grade of the pieces rendered and knowing that they were skillfully executed. It will be seen—and remembered by all who heard her—that Mrs. Keith, the accomplished wife of the Rev. B. M. Keith, gave a very appropriate reading. If the NEWS remembers correctly this was the first occasion on which this talented lady was heard here in public as a reader. She reads as well as she sings, which is saying much. Her tones are rich and clear, full of expression, and used with a skill which shows careful cultivation. Her selection, King Robert of Sicily, was a beautiful one and delightfully rendered.

Four Junior League boys acted as ushers and performed the duties gracefully. They were George Mauger, Jack Crutcher, Luther Atkins and Jim Ferguson.

The concert program consisted of sacred solos, duets, quartettes, choruses, and instrumental music, by such authors Mendelssohn, Stainer, Louden, Hall, Lacey, Palmer, etc.

Baptist Church.

It was Missionary Day at the Baptist Church and the services at night aptly remembered Easter as well. The missionary feature was set forth by fifteen or sixteen girls, part of whom were dressed in white, representing Dixie, while the remaining girls were clad in black, representing the various benighted lands where the Southern Baptist Missionary Society has its Embassadors of the Cross. Those who represented the benighted lands bore unlighted candles and asked for light, which they received from their friends from the southland of the United States. The ceremony was a very pretty one. A symposium in missionary work was interesting, led by Prof. Chandler, of the K. N. C. The programme was agreeably interspersed with songs, recitations and readings.

CIRCUIT COURT HARD AT WORK.

Many Cases are Being Tried. Papers Well Executed. Two Felony Convictions.

The April term of the Lawrence Circuit Court began on Monday last. Promptly at 10 a. m. Judge Redwine assumed the bench, gave the desk a vigorous rap with his gavel, and "big court" was "on." Sheriff Stone presented his deputies, who were sworn to make the summoning of jurors in the proper manner, and the grand jury, the "Big Twelve," was impaneled. The following named were selected and sworn:

John G. Thompson, Harmon Cordie, J. N. Queen, S. W. Burton, J. M. Lester, Taylor Frazier, Strother Fitzpatrick, L. F. Boggs, James Compton, L. E. Bradley, Jas. Y. Carter, Milt Carter.

The judge named S. W. Burton foreman. It was generally remarked that the present body of inquisitors is the youngest looking grand jury ever impaneled in the Lawrence Circuit Court. Most of them never served in this capacity before. It is an intelligent body of citizens and housekeepers.

Judge Redwine's Charge.

The charge made to the grand jury of the present term of the Lawrence Circuit Court was a model of strength, brevity and comprehensiveness. It occupied only a short time, but in that period Judge Redwine said much. He spoke first of the ancient nation whose laws were engraved upon the pillars of a vast building where the public gathered; graven in such letters as all might see; so "that he who ran might read." Thus all might know the law and thus be unable to make the plea of ignorance as excuse for violation. The people, knowing the laws and knowing that they would be rigidly enforced, were slow to violate Judge the basis for an appeal to the This was the basis for appeal to the on their part to find out and to present, and to the petit jury to enforce and punish.

Judge Redwine consumed no time in generalities, but he spoke at considerable length and to the point concerning some of the graver offenses against the common law and the statutes. Homicides, wounding, crimes upon women and against the personal and property rights of the individual. In his admonition to the grand jury he said that while it was the duty of that body to be diligent, it was not proper that they should be actuated by spite or malice.

He called especial attention to the cowardly habit of carrying concealed deadly weapons. After denouncing it in the severest terms he spoke in warning and appeal to those who were guilty of the worse than useless habit. The new statute against the offense, soon to go into effect, was a drastic one. For the first conviction the penalty is a heavy fine, six months' confinement in the county jail and disfranchisement for a period of two years. For the second conviction the punishment is confinement in the penitentiary.

The following named compose the regular petit jurors for the term:

Mont Cooksey, A. J. Evans, Alfred Young, George Bishop, Roscoe Maynard, W. A. Copley, Valentine Burke, Hild Hays, H. B. Hewlett, George Picklesimer, M. F. Maynard, Jas. Q. Lackey, Charles Bailey, M. B. Sparks, Rich Gusley, Parish Sparks, W. M. Fannin, Jerry Skaggs, Sr., Ves Jordan, J. B. Webb, Wallace Jordan, M. J. Baker, John A. Frazier, Mart Hay, R. S. Chaffin, K. Fraley, Wade Chambers, Gum Berry, M. L. Moore, L. A. Burton, A. Wellman, W. H. Adams, Harve Burchett, O. B. Stump, Robt. Burchett.

An unusually large number of people from all over the county was in town this week. Very many of them came in obedience to a summons to appear before the grand jury. Twelve felony cases were set for Wednesday, the third day of the term. Some of these are important cases, and many witnesses had been summoned, some of whom are under attachment.

The case against Dr. Motley, charged with homicide in Morgan county and brought to this county by a change of venue, was called Wednesday. The Commonwealth announced ready but the defendant moved for a continuance. Affidavits were made in support of the motion. On Thursday morning the court overruled the motion and ordered that the trial begin at one o'clock. The trial of this case will probably consume the remainder of this week, as many witnesses are to be examined.

An extraordinary amount of work was done in disposing of Commonwealth cases during the first three days of the term. On Tuesday, for instance, four juries were out at one time. While three of them were deliberating another case was called. Both sides announced ready. The Judge ordered the sheriff to summon a jury from the bystanders, both sides accepted it and the case was tried. Commonwealth's Attorney Waugh, ready and equipped for any amount of work, alert and vigorous, has been at his post of duty since the presiding judge began the term. He expects to see the trial of the last case called on the criminal docket. Already enough felonies have been set for next week to keep the prosecutor busy during that time.

Tom Workman, brought here from Wayne county, was fined $50 for malicious cutting and wounding.

John F. Rist, a wet goods dealer in Catlettsburg, was fined $100 in one case and $100 and 40 days in jail in another for shipping liquor to Louisa. He is indicted in several other cases for similar offenses.

Mat Berry, who was indicted for illegal voting, demurred to the indictment. The demurrer was sustained and the grand jury failed to find another.

Roy Henson was fined $50 for giving liquor to a minor.

Elbin J. McDugal, charged with bigamy, plead guilty and made a sympathetic appeal to all in the court house. He said he was sorry for what he had done, had taken his case to the Lord and that he was "all right." The penalty is confinement in the penitentiary from three to nine years. His wives were Miss Fannie Graves, of Roanoke, Va., Miss Mary Austin, of this county, and Miss Nancy Burnett, of Lexington, Ky. All were here during the trial.

Pete Blankenship was fined $50 for voting twice.

Sam Carter was tried Thursday and was convicted of false swearing. The penalty, under the indeterminate sentence law, is confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than seven years. After Carter's indictment for this offense he fled to Portsmouth, where later he was found by Sheriff Stone and brought back to Louisa and placed in jail.

MURDER IN WAYNE COUNTY.

Bernard Mills, a prominent citizen of Wayne county, was shot and instantly killed early Sunday morning at the house of a woman named Effie Fortner, near East Lynn. He was shot through a window, and "Mink" Justice has been arrested charged with the crime.

Washington, April 14.—Representative John W. Langley and Representative J. A. Tentative arrangements were made for a rehearing of the case on May 19, when delegations from Kentucky and West Virginia will urge the improvements.

IN CUPID'S COURT

BY ARNOLD DAVIS.

"I don't ask your help and advice as our family lawyer, Mr. Cleveland," he said, "but as my friend and my father's friend. I am not going into all the details of my trouble. It is banded and gossiped about in every club and at every tea, but that doesn't bother me.

"What if they do know that my wife and I have separated, and have been apart for a month? The fact that they know all that doesn't affect me in the least, and they are nothing to me, but Helen! She's all the difference! I can't forget her although I've tried hard. Sometimes when I get to thinking of her and see her sweet face and dark blue eyes and sort of hear her laugh the way she used to before our trouble why, I can hardly stand it.

"I love her just as much as I ever did, Judge, and to me she will always be the one woman in the world; but I can't stay here in New York and see her only in some passing carriage or at some chance concert, so I'm going away. Charley White is going to Africa hunting and has asked me to go.

"I've a favor to ask of you, Judge, before I go, and I can leave a great deal easier with the knowledge that it is in your trust and care and that all its conditions will be carried out. It is a letter I have written to Helen, and I've tried to tell her everything about that affair with Mrs. Manning which made all the trouble. After I've said I want you to see her and tell her all I said, and if I should never come back everything I have will be hers."

Young Travers rose and took his hat and came from the table. He tried to be cheerful, but the keen old Judge saw and understood.

"I'm awfully sorry, my boy," he said, as he laid a kindly hand on his shoulder. "It pains me more than I can tell you, and I would give a great deal to help you, but I cannot see any way. At any rate, trust me and wait. It won't do any harm to go away for a time, and perhaps things may come right."

Travers tried to speak, but his voice choked and he could only press the Judge's hand in answer, and with head bowed in thought he moved to the door and opened it, when he started back in surprise.

"There's Helen, now," he gasped as he moved away from the door. "She is coming in here, and that's the last thing I want when she feels the way she does. Can't I wait somewhere?"

"There's the consultation room; go in there," answered the Judge, and as Travers closed the door of the private room the Judge waited and wondered what use Fate was making of him.

The door opened and Mrs. Travers slowly entered. She was all that Travers had described her to be, but a sad look had settled on the once happy face and the eyes that had sparkled and danced with the joy of living bore traces of sorrow and tears.

"I don't know how to begin, Judge," she said, as she seated herself in the Judge's comfortable chair. "I've known you for a long time—ever since I was a little girl with dolls, when you used to hold me and tell me those stories about the bears—so I have come to you first of all for help. It's about Mr.—er, about my—well, it is all about Bob. I've tried so hard to sit still and let it pass, and forget it all, but I can't; and no matter how hard I try, he always comes back and I think of the happy times we once had together."

The Judge rose from his chair with an eager, happy look. "Will you pardon me for a moment, Mrs. Travers?" he said. "I want to make a memorandum before it slips my mind," and he moved to his desk and wrote hurriedly on a pad. Then with a quick turn he moved to the private office door and, turning the knob, opened the door a few inches. He stood for a moment with his hand on the knob, while a smile lit up the square jaw and battle-lined features.

"I'm quite sure, Mrs. Travers," he said, and his words rang out loud and clear to the waiting husband as he sat bowed in thought, "that we can talk much more comfortably if some of this heat is let out. The janitor never realizes that spring and a booming furnace are sworn enemies."

He resumed his seat and listened patiently and kindly as she poured out a heart full of trouble. The telephone angrily rang out call after call and downtown a board of directors waited for the Judge's coming, for it was many a hard fought battle that Judge Cleveland's advice and help had won for them.

"You know how badly things have gone lately," she began, "and how our home is broken. I thought at first I would not care what became of Bob, but last night I read in the paper that he is going to Africa, and it came home to me then that I did care very much and that I loved him just as much as ever. It isn't as if he were going to Bar Harbor or some place where we have friends, but to Africa, away from all friends to escape, perhaps, the fever there only to be killed by the natives, is terrible. And when I think of him away off there without friends or help, I can't bear it, and I know now I love him with all my heart, and I don't want him to go."

"It is almost two months now since we parted and I thought it was forever, because, you see, I felt hurt and told him I never wanted to see him again; but I've thought a lot about it lately and I can see now that it was my fault, too. He is going away, perhaps never to come back again, and so I want you to see him before he goes and give him this letter. Don't tell him who sent it; simply say that it is to be opened on board the boat. I've told him everything and asked him to forgive my selfishness and unkindness, and I've wished him luck. We used to be so happy once."

And as the Judge leaned forward and took her hands in sympathy she buried her face on his shoulder and sobbed.

"Don't feel so badly, Helen," he said, he stroked her head and gave her the sympathy that only Judge Cleveland, with the heart and soul of a life of good deeds, could give.

He rose from his chair and took a letter from his desk, and then with a smile quietly took her letter from her hand.

"I am going out for a few moments," he said, "but before I go I want to give you a letter that was left here for you, and I want you to open it now and read it while I am away."

He crossed the room for his coat and hat, and as he passed the private office door skillfully tossed a letter with a heavy seal and faint perfume, addressed to Robert A. Travers, Esq., into a corner of the room where a young man was eagerly watching the castles in Spain that passed before him.

The Judge paused for a moment as he reached the office door and vigorously wiped out a particle of dust that had suddenly and mysteriously filled his eyes.

"I'm getting to be an old man," he said, as he gazed intently at Mr. Travers, although his voice was rather loud and he spoke very carefully and seemed to weigh and measure his words, as though he wanted the robins outside the window to hear them, too, and chirp them abroad, "and I look at life very differently from what I did years ago when I was your age. It all depends on how much we put into life that is going to affect our own happiness and that of others. I always think of a line of Lowell's, 'Not what we give but what we share, for the gift without the giver is bare.' You see, helping the next fellow who has a heavier load to carry, perhaps, than yours will help you, too, and whether you see it or not, there will be a better feeling in your heart for it. And lots of times things will appear strange and unreasonable, but before you speak or judge look for the motive underneath it all, and often you will find that, although things went wrong, nothing but good-will and kindness were meant. May God bless you both."

He slowly opened the door, and with a glance towards the private office, passed out into the hall and rang for the elevator. As he stood waiting he eagerly and anxiously listened with ear near the office door. All was quiet and the Judge bravely fought a fear that stubbornly rose to his heart. Then he heard a rush from the private office and the happy words that meant so much.

"Helen! Robert!" The old Judge passed out from the building with head held high, happily twirling his cane and trying to bring back a boyish whistle that he had lost years ago in the fierce fight for fame.

Tea Drinking Facts. Nearly 3,000 cups of tea are annually drunk by each individual in Great Britain, for the estimate per head is six and one-half pounds. New Zealanders enjoy fully seven and one-half pounds per head, while less than one pound per head is credited to Russia. In 1912 165,000,000 pounds of Indian tea were consumed as against 148,000,000 pounds ten years ago.

A comparison might easily be made between the pot that steeps all day on the hob and the morning teapot of the middle-class household. American women of taste will not even pour water on tea to make a second brew out of the same leaves. They habitually use the finest quality of tea, generally putting forth China and Indian on the table, and after one pouring of the infused beverage, the leaves are thrown away and a second supply put into the receptacle.

Unfortunately, in Britain the same kind of teapot does service every morning. The mistress of the average home does not take the trouble to note new systems of producing better results than those already known. Where the cult of tea is really practiced the same mixture is not served every morning.

Life of Wooden Ships. The old wooden ships, though they often enjoyed a very long life, usually began to decline in utility quickly enough. The Betsy Cairns, for instance, which began life as a British royal yacht, had gradually slipped down the social scale to the status of a coasting collier when she was wrecked, and all the other centenarian vessels met a similar fate. The old East India company reckoned the life of its vessels as four voyages, which occupied eight years, and it was very rare indeed for one to leave port more than six times under the company's flag. The vessels of the navy, too, in the eighteenth century were not expected to do duty for more than 20 years at the most.

Not So Far. "So you want to marry my daughter," said Mr. Cumro. "Yes," replied the young man. "I hope to hear you say take her aid be happy!" "No, sir. I'm not going to shoulder any implied responsibilities. All I am going to say is 'take her.'—Washington Star.

KEEPING DRESSER DAINTY

Highly Desirable Point, but One That Needs Exercise of the Utmost Vigilance.

Every housekeeper knows the difficulty of keeping dresser coverings spic and span and appropriately dainty for a cretonne hung bedroom. An unconscionable amount of dust seems to collect on every dresser overnight and to the dust are added "flings of talcum powder. It is well nigh impossible to remove all the dresser belongings each day and shake out the covers, but going over the dresser top with a small whisk broom will help matters amazingly. The brushes, frames, bottles, etc., should be carefully dusted every morning, for nothing is so distressing as dust on a dainty dresser.

The idea of having a slab of beveled glass over the embroidery or lace cover does not appeal to some women. It has a coldly neat but obviously labor-saving suggestion that implies economy exercised in household service. So most dressers are graced with spreads of cretonne, lace, embroidery or swiss, entirely unprotected by glass. Cretonne covers are serviceable, but they are not as dainty as covers of embroidery, dotted swiss or lace trimmed organdie over a lining of colored sateen. This lining should be exactly the size of the sheer cover and not the size of the dresser top. If small metal snap buttons are attached to sateen lining and cover at the four corners the two pieces of fabric will not slip apart or "ride over" the edge of the dresser at the front as covers sometimes do. If cretonne to match curtains or cushions is used to cover the dresser a strip of white net, first shrunken and pressed out again, should be laid over the cretonne and attached to it around the edges under a fancy edge banding or ball trimming. The veiling of net softens and blends the cretonne colors into a beautiful harmony of delicate tints.

Pies should always be glazed with white of egg if you wish them to be a shiny brown.

All liver must be fresh to make desirable food.

Mildew may be removed by soaking the garment in buttermilk.

Common baking soda on a damp cloth is useful to clean bathtubs.

An extra nail for a stray towel or garment is a handy thing in a bathroom.

When nailing hard wood soap the nail first, and it is less likely to split the wood.

Every room in a house, even in winter, should be thoroughly aired at least once a day.

A china dish with three compartments is handy for passing cheese.

Plenty of towel rails around the bath tub are advisable if the room is used by more than one person.

If brass or copper have become rusty, the rust may be rubbed off with a weak solution of oxalic acid.

If hot fat is spilled on the floor, throw cold water on it at once, and it will not soak into the boards so deeply.

Potato Pyramids.

An unusual way of combining sweet and white potatoes is given below:

Boil large sweet potatoes, cut half-inch slices from the largest part to serve as the foundation for the pyramids.

In the center of each slice put a spoonful of well-seasoned mashed potato, made stiff enough to keep its position.

Top each mound with a tiny cube of sweet potato.

Apricot Tapioca Pudding.

Drain a sirup from a pint can of apricots and add to it enough water to make one pint of the liquid; heat to the boiling point, stir in two tablespoons of quick-cooking tapioca and one-half teaspoon of salt and cook over boiling water until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Butter a baking dish, put in the apricots, cover with the tapioca, and bake about 20 minutes. Serve hot with cream and sugar.

The Dishpan.

Have you a porcelain sink? If so, good. But even if you have an iron one, painted white, you can use the new rubber mat, which fits over the drain and makes the dishpan superfluous. Best of all, it costs only ten cents. With one of these mats all one needs do is to scrape the dishes, put them in the sink with the soap or washing powder and turn on the hot water. Besides saving the cost of a dishpan one saves much wear and tear upon the porcelain sink in moving the pans about.

Lyonnais Potatoes.

Melt one tablespoon of butter in a spider, add one tablespoon each of minced onion, vinegar and water; fry until the onion is tender; now add one pint of diced cold boiled potatoes and stir until somewhat browned; add one level teaspoon of parsley and serve.

Simple Oyster Stew.

One quart milk. As soon as it begins to boil drop in one pint of oysters. Add salt and pepper. Boil five minutes or until edges curl. Pour into bowl and add butter.

Banish the "Blues!"

If you have that depressed feeling it's more than likely that your blood is out of order—impoverished or poisoned.

There is only one thing that will alter your present condition—that's to restore your stomach to normal health and strength. For a weak or diseased stomach cannot make good blood. If your digestion is bad your food will not make the good blood which nourishes body, brain, heart and nerve.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

helps the stomach to do its work naturally and properly. Stimulates the liver. The system is freed from poison. The blood is purified. Every organ is rejuvenated. Instead of the "Blues," you feel fit and strong, equal to any task or up to any pleasure.

This great remedy has proved its worth year after year for over forty years. Let it prove its worth to you. Sold by medicine dealers in tablet or liquid form or send 50c for trial box by mail.

Send 31 one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only on a free copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages, clothbound. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

for much sickness and suffering because its quality determines our resistive power. With poor blood we are languid, susceptible to colds, lack natural energy and ambition, and the gradual decline of strength makes prompt and careful treatment necessary. Drugs or alcohol cannot make blood and must be avoided.

SCOTT'S EMULSION is nature's grandest blood-maker because of its wholesome medical nourishment, so carefully predigested that it assimilates without taxing digestion and quickly increases the red corpuscles in the blood, strengthens the organs and rebuilds the whole system.

OLD FOLKS FIND NEW REMEDY RELIEVES ALL KIDNEY AND BLADDER MISERIES

Sleep disturbing bladder weaknesses, backache, rheumatism, and the many other kindred ailments which so commonly come with declining years, need no longer be a source of dread and misery to those who are past the middle age of life.

The new discovery, Croxone, overcomes all such disorders because it removes the very cause of the trouble. It soaks right into the kidneys, through the walls and linings; cleans out the little filtering glands and cells, and gives the kidneys new strength to do their work properly. It neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid substances that lodge in the joints and muscles, causing rheumatism; and makes the kidneys filter and sift out all the poisonous waste matter from the blood and drive it out of the system.

It matters not how old you are or how long you have suffered, Croxone is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results. You will find it different from all other remedies. There is nothing else on earth like it. It starts to work immediately and more than a few doses are seldom required to relieve even the most chronic, obstinate cases.

It is the most wonderful remedy ever made for restoring the lifeless organs to health and strength and ridding the system of every particle of uric acid, and you can take it with the utmost confidence that nothing on earth will so quickly cure such conditions.

You can obtain an original package of Croxone at trifling cost from any first-class druggist. All druggists are authorized to personally return the purchase price if Croxone should fail in a single case.

HIS OWN MEDICINE

By J. A. TIFFANY.

"Say, Joe, do you happen to have a hundred in your clothes?" "Got it in the safe, father—which is just as handy. More, too, if you want it."

"No; I thank you, boy. A hundred will do me."

As the father pocketed the five $20 bills and left the office, Joe Kershaw looked after him with a proud and affectionate glance, then sighed, as he reflected how much older Mr. Kershaw was looking this morning.

This little money transaction reminded him of many similar ones years ago, when the positions of the two men had been reversed.

"Funny!" Kershaw soliloquized. "Father used to object very strongly to that term 'in your clothes,' whenever I had occasion to touch him myself. But it's the first time, I guess, that he ever asked anybody for money, and I suppose he found the phrase expressive."

Though still quite a young man, and a highly proper sort of person, there had been a time when Joe Kershaw was as wild as the best—or the worst—of the boys.

Many were the hundreds—the thousands, for that matter—that the old gentleman had been called upon to pay out on account of Joe's vagaries; and they had always been paid without a murmur.

Of the most staid and exemplary habits himself, Mr. Kershaw had always treated his son's follies leniently; borne them with philosophy. Of old Puritan stock, he had prided himself upon the absence of any hereditary tendency to dissipation in his own family, and accounted for all the boy's vagaries on the theory of some ancestral taint on the side of Joe's mother.

Joe was not particularly ashamed of those days; though he was not in the habit of talking about them, either. He regarded it as "all in a lifetime"—part of a man's experience. If a fellow was born to make a fool of himself for a certain number of years, while he was young, he would do it—so Kershaw reasoned. The only thing he ever regretted about it was the anxiety and pain he had caused his excellent old father. Sometimes, Mr. Kershaw had remonstrated with his son, in a mild sort of way, over some piece of folly more flagrant than usual; but he had never refused to "cough up" and come to the rescue. In money matters he had always been liberal.

This morning Joe remembered the last occasion on which he had gone to his father for help out of his difficulties. It was a big sum that he wanted, and as the old gentleman signed his name to the check, he had said, in a kind, quiet way: "Don't you think, Joe, it would pay you to get married and settle down?"

"I believe you are right, father," he had replied, "but where's the decent girl who would marry a fellow like me?"

"There are lots of them, my boy. You don't want to get into the way of thinking of yourself like that. You're not a bad fellow. All you have to do is to pull yourself together and settle down to hard work. It's really astonishing how quickly people will forget a young man's peccadilloes, when they see he's trying to go right. You have brains and energy. You can make your mark in the law, if you like. I believe in letting a boy have his fling, but you don't want to let the follies of youth become the vices of your manhood, Joe. I don't want to see you go to the dogs."

"You are perfectly right, dad," Joe had replied as he folded the check and put it in his pocket. "I guess I'll put the peg in and quit."

This morning Joe rehearsed that scene. Almost word for word. He was glad to have the opportunity now, of accommodating his father with a hundred dollars. He was sorry the old gentleman had not wanted a thousand.

By the irony of fate, Joe Kershaw, the reformed rake, had been impressed into the service of a vigilance committee, which had been formed in Swifton, for the purpose of purifying the city of some of its gambling hells, all-night saloons, and other "sinks of iniquity," which, according to the pulp agitators, were being run in defiance of law and disregard of decency.

About 12 o'clock that night, in pursuance of this committee work, Joe Kershaw happened into one of the more pretentious of the downtown saloons, to see what was going on.

"Looking for your father?" was the first greeting he received. It came from a tipsy young gentleman in evening dress, whom Kershaw knew by sight and reputation.

"No, sir; I am not," Kershaw replied, distantly.

"Well, of course, I didn't know," the young fellow returned with a grin and a hiccup. "But if you do want him, he's in the side room there, entertaining Nellie Nimbler, the star at the Grand this week, with a bird and a bottle. Wouldn't like to see you go in and spoil love's young dream, but, of course, if you want him—well, that's where he is, you see."

The sound of a woman's voice rallying her companion on some too youthful gallantry, came from the room indicated, and was followed by a familiar laugh. Then Joe heard the tones of his father's voice, in gentle deprecation, and, turning on his heel, he left the place, without pursuing his investigations further.

The next day Kershaw did not see his father, at all, but on the morning following the old gentleman was around at his office bright and early.

"Say, Joe," said he, slapping the young man on the shoulder, "can you help me out? I've got to have a thousand dollars right off."

"Certainly, father," Kershaw replied in the tone and with the air of a man seeking rather than conferring a favor—the air of a man fearing a lecture on extravagance.

Carefully folding the check that Joe handed him, Mr. Kershaw gave his son a pleasant nod and said:

"You're not looking very well, my boy. Working too hard, I guess. It won't do, Joe. You must take care of yourself."

"Yes, father," Joe answered sheepishly.

With the check in his pocket and whistling an air from the new opera, Mr. Kershaw walked jauntily out of his son's office.

That night Joe's duties as member of the Swifton vigilance committee took him into a gambling room. He found a faro bank and a keno game in full operation, besides several small tables surrounded by men playing poker.

At first, the smoke from many cigars affected Kershaw's sight and respiration, and before he had become accustomed to it, he heard his father's voice. The old gentleman was just saying in the most cheery tones:

"Give me $50 worth, and I'll have another flutter."

That was enough for Joe. The subsequent proceedings interested him no more. He walked sorrowfully away.

Though people were, naturally, diffident of saying anything to the younger Kershaw concerning the old gentleman's eccentricities, some things inevitably came to Joe's ears. Hardly a day passed on which he did not hear something of his father's continued evil courses to make him anxious and miserable.

But things reached a climax when, late one night, on his way home from the club, Kershaw met his father with a gang of young roysterers, marching arm in arm down the middle of the street, wearing their coats turned inside out, and singing "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight."

Catching sight of his son, Mr. Kershaw broke away from his companions and darted up a side street. Following, at a leisurely, dignified pace, young Kershaw ran his quarry to earth, near his own door.

"Won't you come in and take a nightcap, father?" he asked.

The old gentleman accepted the invitation, and over a cigar and a glass of toddy he was the first to broach the painful subject that occupied the son's mind these days to the exclusion of everything else.

"Tell you what it is, Joe," he said. "I'm going to reform."

"Reform?" the young man echoed, as if he considered his father the most exemplary old gentleman in the world.

"Oh, you know, Joe. No need of pretense between you and me. Fact is, Joe, I'm going to the bow-wow, and you know it."

"I wouldn't say that, father."

"Why shouldn't I say it, when it's true. I'm a disgrace to you, and there's no use of your denying it. But I'm going to alter my hand. Trouble is that I didn't sow my wild oats when I was a young fellow. That was dead wrong. It's always best to get it over and done with. A man may go along to forty or fifty and think he's a deuce of a swell on the water wagon, but if he's got a bias for playing the giddy ox, it's bound to come out. Still, that doesn't alter the fact that I've been trying to do so for a long time, Joe, but it's uphill work. Now, you know the ropes, Joe; you've been through the mill yourself. Tell me—what's the best thing for a fellow to do in order to break away from it all. Give the old man a straight tip, Joe."

"Well, father," Kershaw replied, after a moment's reflection, "you're not an old man. You're good for 25 or 30 years yet; why don't you marry and settle down?"

"You're right, boy. That's what I told you to do, a few years ago—to get married and settle down. Give me your hand! What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. Yes, I'll take my own medicine, too."

Giant Cofferdam.

A vast reinforced concrete monolithic foundation is being built entirely around the area upon which will be erected the new Equitable building in this city, a structure which will contain one million square feet of rentable floor space, and will tower aloft to a height of thirty-six stories. The coffer-dam will be a solid concrete wall, six feet broad and eighty feet deep, extending eighty feet to solid rock. This will be the largest office building yet constructed. It will weigh over 200,000 tons as against the weight of 103,000 tons of the Woolworth building, 188,500 tons of the Municipal building, and 82,500 tons of the Singer building. The steel framework alone will weight 45,000 tons, as against 25,000 tons required for the Woolworth building.—Scientific American.

GO TO SUNDAY SCHOOL SUNDAY

ONE MILLION PEOPLE WANTED IN SUNDAY-SCHOOLS SUNDAY, MAY 3.

WILL YOU BE PRESENT?

Kentucky Sunday-School Association Co-Operating With Every Sunday-School in State To Make "Go To Sunday-School Sunday" a Big Success—Will You Be There?

Louisville, Ky. — (Special.) — The Kentucky Sunday-school association is co-operating with every Sunday-school in the state to make Sunday, May 3, a "Go-To-Sunday-school Sunday," with the aim of having ONE MILLION PEOPLE in the Sunday-schools of the state on that day. There are about five thousand Sunday-schools in Kentucky, with an enrollment of half a million. To attain the desired aim every Sunday-school will have to double its usual attendance.

There are some of the country schools that close for the winter and have not started for this year, therefore it will be necessary for some of our schools to aim at large things, not satisfied with having just twice as many, but having on that day an increase of two or three hundred per cent. This can be done. It will take a little effort, some wise planning, the working together of a large number of people, the use of the papers and all means of giving publicity to the movement. It will be necessary to get the parents to bring all the babies whose names are on the Cradle Rolls to the Sunday-school on that day. Then all the Home Department members will have to attend the school services.

The people who used to go to Sunday-school a long time ago, but who have not been there for weeks, months or perhaps years, will have to come back that day. The Adult Bible Classes will have to find all the grown people of the towns and country and bring them out on this occasion. The boys and girls will need to gather in all of their companions.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

Helping All the Sunday-Schools of Kentucky—Wants Your Co-Operation.

The Kentucky Sunday-school Association is a combination of all of the Sunday-schools of the state, under the direction of a State Executive Committee composed of representative members from all of the Evangelical churches. Its object is to produce in each person a true loyalty to his own church, and to secure an earnest co-operation upon the part of all churches to reach all who are not connected with any Sunday-school and persuade them to become students of the Bible and enrolled members in some Sunday-school.

The field covered is the entire state—4,000 Sunday-schools, 35,000 officers and teachers, and 325,000 pupils. A county organization has been formed in every county. It operates through conventions, institutes, schools of method, rallies, special meetings, visits to schools and churches, printed leaflets on various phases of Sunday-school work, and the circulation of a monthly paper called "The Kentucky Sunday-school Reporter." Through county and district officers, through personal visits and letters from the state force the best things are placed within the reach of the smallest school.

Last year, in addition to the Annual State Convention and the Annual School of Methods, county conventions were held in about one hundred counties, six hundred district conventions and one thousand rallies. Twenty institutes were held lasting from three to five days each.

There are five persons giving their entire time to the work of the Association—Rev. Geo. A. Joplin, General Secretary; Rev. T. C. Gebauer and Mr. W. J. Vaughan, Field Workers; Miss Maude L. Dance, Elementary Field Worker, and Miss Frances L. Grigsby, Office Secretary, while Mr. E. S. Boswell gives about one-sixth of his time. A great part of the strength of the Association is in the hundreds of splendid volunteer Sunday-school workers who give much time without any pay.

Because of this organization, and the fact that all churches are represented, the largest amount of service can be rendered at the least expense. Conventions and institutes can be held in places where no denomination is strong enough to hold such gatherings alone, thus saving many weak schools and discovering many neglected places.

Much of the work is truly Home Mission work. The Association sends its workers wherever there is need without reference to the financial returns.

The Association has no income except voluntary contributions from individuals and Sunday-schools. In order to do the work that was needed a debt of $1,500 has accumulated, and all who read this are asked to send some contribution to Mr. Clarence Watkins, Treasurer, 712 Louisville Trust Building, Louisville, to apply on this debt.

The International Sunday-school Convention will meet in Chicago on June 23. A goal has been set for every state to be out of debt by that time. Most of the Southern states have reached the goal. Do not let Kentucky fall behind the other states. Send your contribution now and make it just as large as you can.

NEXT STATE CONVENTION

The next State Convention of the Kentucky Sunday-school Association will be held in October in Lexington. Every Sunday-school in Kentucky is entitled to send delegates. The more schools represented the better a convention it will be. Those schools that have delegates are the schools that will receive the benefit. The counties that send delegates to Sunday-school conventions are the counties where the greatest advance is being made in every way.

"GO-TO-SUNDAY-SCHOOL DAY" MAY 3

ORDER OF SERVICE.

School—How many Sunday Schools are there in the world?

Leader—There are about 300,000 Sunday Schools, with an enrollment of 30,000,000 in seventy nations of the world. And the Sunday school army is now growing at the rate of 1,000,000 per year.

School—What is the World's Sunday School Association?

Leader—The World's Sunday School Association is an organization of Christian men and women, representing all the Sunday Schools in the world, having for its aim the promotion of a missionary spirit in the Sunday Schools on the home field and a Sunday School spirit on the mission fields.

School—What is the field of the International Sunday School Association?

Leader—The International Sunday School Association operates throughout North America, with its 122,575,180 inhabitants, and where there are 171,144 Sunday Schools with an enrollment of 16,431,010, or more than one-half the Sunday School enrollment of the world.

School—What are some signs of progress of Sunday School work in North America?

Leader—In this field there are being added to the membership of the churches Sunday School members at the rate of 1,074 each day.

Men—Every Sunday School that is keeping in step has its organized class of men studying God's Word on Sunday, enjoying Christian fellowship continually, and together serving the community where they live.

Women—Everywhere churches are providing for those who teach and those who are to be the teachers of religion in the days to come.

Boys—Temperance teaching is being thoroughly and effectively done; and it is interesting and down to the minute.

Girls—Through the whole curriculum is definite, positive missionary instruction. The missionary spirit, the Christ spirit, is the spirit of the modern Sunday School.

Men—All over the country there is an awakening among men and women to the needs of boys and girls in their teens and these men and women feel a sense of responsibility for the ministry of the Sunday School unto the all-round development of the boy and the girl.

Women—The little children have lessons, teachers and equipment suited to their needs.

School—How many people are expected in the Sunday Schools of Kentucky today?

Leader—One million, more than twice the present enrollment.

School—Who appointed this day as "Go-to-Sunday-School Day"?

Leader—The Kentucky Sunday School Association.

School—What is the Kentucky Sunday School Association?

Leader—The Kentucky Sunday School Association is an organization representing all the Sunday Schools of Kentucky. It stands for co-operation. It encourages and stimulates work among the schools throughout the state, by bringing the strong into helpful contact with the weak. It stands for the best in equipment, teaching and management.

School—What has the Kentucky Sunday School Association accomplished?

Leader—It has made the Christian people of Kentucky dissatisfied with the inadequate religious instruction of the days of old and inspired them to seek improvement in every direction. It has faithfully presented to all, the best in every department of Sunday School work, making the common heritage whatever of good any worker anywhere has discovered.

It has induced hundreds of schools to extend their sessions from three or four months in the year to ten or twelve months. It has intensified denominational loyalty and at the same time driven sectarianism to cover by giving to the world a demonstration of the beauty and the power of co-operation.

It has brought within the reach of every officer and every teacher of every Sunday School in Kentucky conventions and institutions.

In short, if the Sunday Schools of Kentucky are any better, or any more popular to-day than they were fifty years ago, it is in part, at least, because of the work of the Kentucky Sunday School Association.

School—Is our school a part of this organization?

Leader—Every Sunday School in Kentucky has benefited by this organization and is a part of it. There is no joining it, nor any withdrawing from it. There is just the question of how far we shall co-operate with it, how much of the good it has for us we will receive. Its meetings are open to us, its workers are willing to help us, we can write to its officers, call on its superintendents, get its literature and through it keep in touch with the whole Sunday School world.

School—What shall we do to have a part in this work?

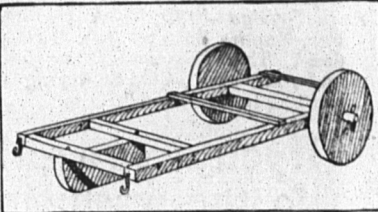

Leader—To-day each of us is asked to make an offering in this work, all of which will be used to make more and better Sunday Schools in Kentucky, so that the Word of God shall be carried by the hand of a competent, consecrated teacher to every man, woman, boy and girl in our state.

ORCHARD GLEANINGS

HANDY CART FOR WATERING

Two Cultivator Wheels May Be Employed in Constructing Device for Hauling Needed Water.

In sections of the country where irrigation is not practicable and trees and other things must be watered, a device about two-thirds cart and one-third sled can be used to draw water for any purpose in a dry time, it is made for one horse. The cart is easily made. In its construction, one may use a 3-by-4-inch timber for the axle, two long pieces of 2-by-3-inch scantling for the sides of the frame, and two short pieces of the same material for crosspieces, two wooden wheels and a single runner. Round down the ends of the 3-by-4-inch piece, making about 7 inches of each end into a spindle 2½ inches in diameter. The length of the axle can be made to suit. Mortise and bolt the long 2-by-3-inch pieces on axle and on the two crosspieces, which are placed about 18 inches apart, making a frame 2 or 3½ feet wide and 6 feet long. From a 2-by-8-inch plank cut a runner of proper length to fit between the crosspieces. Saw two wheels from a tree 14 inches in diameter, with about a 5-inch wide face or rim. The wheels are kept in place by a wooden pin or iron bolt in the protruding end of the axle. Set the barrel well back over the axle and the front end of the cart will be nearly or quite clear of the ground when in motion. A couple of strips may be nailed across the frame to hold the barrel from sliding off. Put tug hooks at the front to hitch to. Two cultivator or harrow wheels may be used and an iron axle substituted.

RULES FOR PRUNING TREES

All Branches That Obstruct the Sun-shine and Air Should Be Cut Out—Washing Is Big Aid.

Pruning may be done as soon as the cold days are over. From the middle of February to the middle of March is the best time to prune in our climate.

Prune when the trees are not frozen. If done now, it saves time, which is valuable during summer weather.

Before pruning study each tree to see what it needs. Trees only need pruning when cross branches are allowed to obstruct the sunshine and air. Cut out all such branches, make a clean cut with a sharp saw close to the limb. All dead limbs and suckers growing at the base of trees should be removed. Paint the wound over with a little good paint to prevent bleeding; the cut surface will soon heal, and new bark will grow over the cut. Scrape off the dead bark from the trunks and larger limbs. This will add much to the neat appearance and produce a healthy growth. A steel hoe, having a short handle ground sharp, is the best implement for this work. After scraping wash with warm water and soft soap or hard-wood ashes. Use a stiff brush. All trees will be greatly benefited by a good washing. It cleanses the bark, kills the large and small insects, and destroys the eggs of many kinds of insects that live in the crevices of the wood. Apple trees should be allowed to grow low with wide-spreading branches fully exposed to the sun. The practice of cutting off all the lower branches so the ground under the trees can be planted to farm or garden crops is wrong. The entire ground should be given to the production of good fruit, and this can only be had by close study, thorough culture, fertilizing, spraying in season, and the use of corn crops winter and summer.

WORKING IN OLD ORCHARDS

Pruning During Winter Will Save Extra Work in Spring When Time Is Much More Precious.

Now is the time to take out dead branches from old orchard trees. Pruning now will save extra work in the spring when time is precious. Moreover, many insects and diseases will be destroyed. To make sure of it burn the limbs. Dead limbs provide excellent camping grounds for insects and diseases, says the Cultivator.

Always cut close to the trunk or main limb; do not leave a stub. The inner bark will then have the best chance of healing over the wound. Saw on both sides of the limb, so that the bark will not be torn off when the limb falls. Always paint over the wounds with tar or some sort of paint to prevent the escaping of moisture. Repaint them whenever it becomes necessary.

Insure Proper Pollination. When planting an orchard, set varieties to insure proper pollination. Every eighth row set to the proper variety will usually be enough to insure pollination.

When Fryng Bacon. Before fryng bacon, if you soak it in cold water for three or four minutes, you will find that it prevents the grease from running.

COLD DAY LUNCHEONS

EASILY PREPARED DISHES THAT WILL SATISFY APPETITE.

Cheese Fritters Economical and Well-come as a Change—Deservedly Popular Is Ragout of Corn and Mutton Chops.

By LIDA AMES WILLIS.

Cheese Fritters.—Mix two tablespoonfuls of grated cheese with two dessertspoonfuls of bread crumbs, half a tablespoonful of dry mustard, a dessertspoonful of butter, a pinch of cayenne. Pound smooth with a potato masher, mixing well; make into balls size of walnuts and flatten them a little. Make a batter with a cup of sifted flour, a tablespoonful of melted butter, scant cupful of warm water, pinch of salt, and the white of one egg, well beaten. Drop the fritters into this and then from a spoon into the hot fat, cooking as you would croquettes.

Ragout of Corn and Mutton Chops.—Cut into small pieces a pound of leg chops of mutton, and put into a saucepan with enough butter to prevent burning, and brown over a hot fire. When well browned add half a can of sweet corn, and season to taste with salt and pepper. Add enough boiling water to moisten. Stir over the fire until well heated and serve at once.

King William's Pudding.—Chop finely two apples, mix with two ounces each of grated bread, sugar and currants; the grated rind of a lemon and just enough of the juice to give a slight acid flavor, a pinch of salt and a suspicion of mustard or ginger. Stir all together with two well-beaten eggs and pour into a well-buttered bowl. Cover with a plate, tie up in a cloth and steam for an hour and a half. Serve with following sauce: Boil together half a cupful of sugar, half a cupful of water, for fifteen minutes. Remove from the fire, and when cooled a little, add the remainder of the lemon juice left from pudding.

Breaded Liver.—Have the liver cut in quarter-inch slices; pour boiling water over them, drain and wipe dry; then season with salt and pepper, dip in beaten egg and into fine bread crumbs and fry for six minutes in deep, hot fat, using the frying basket.

Sweetbread and Lamb Fricassee.—Take a pound of lamb and a good-sized sweetbread; chop both moderately fine; season with a saltspoonful of salt, a quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper, and roll in flour. Fry a moderate brown in butter. Add half a can of tomatoes, an onion, a pinch of sugar and a tablespoonful of finely minced parsley. Stew slowly until thoroughly tender.

Cranberry Meringue.—Beat the whites of three eggs until very stiff; add carefully, one by one, the three yolks to this froth; beat in lightly 1½ cupfuls of sifted granulated sugar and juice of one lemon; add lightly 1½ cupfuls of flour in which half a teaspoonful of baking powder has been sifted. Bake in a long pan, turn out on a platter and spread liberally with a jelly made of one cupful of cranberries, one cupful of sugar and half a cup of water. No not stir the cranberries, but when jellied strain through a sieve. Beat a whole egg with half a cupful of powdered sugar until creamed. Flavor with a few drops of vanilla. Spread on top of the cranberries and serve. This is a delightful and wholesome dessert.

Yorkshire Pudding.

This recipe will serve six people nicely. One-half cup milk, one-half cup of flour, one egg, one-eighth teaspoon salt, one-half cup raisins. Mix salt and flour and add milk gradually to form smooth paste; then add egg, beaten until very light, and, lastly, the raisins. Bake 20 minutes in hot oven. Sauce for pudding.—One-half cup sugar, one cup water, two tablespoons vinegar, pinch of salt. Boil sugar and water ten minutes, then add salt and vinegar hot on pudding. This pudding is to be eaten with meat and vegetables and is delicious.

Baked Beets.

Take well-grown new beets and bake, instead of boiling them. Take off the hard, outside and you will be agreeably surprised with the sweetness of the beet. Slice into a heated vegetable dish and pour over them two tablespoonfuls of melted butter (not oily), mix with the juice of half a lemon and half a teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper.

Nourishing Beef Sandwiches.

Take rare, lean, cold beefsteak or roast beef; run through meat grinder. Season with a few drops of Worcestershire sauce, catsup or a tiny bit of onion juice; season to taste and spread between thin slices of buttered bread. Trim outer crust and cut into neat finger strips.

To Prevent Starch Sticking.

When making hot starch always use soapy water and find it more satisfactory than plain water, as it gives the necessary shine to the linen and prevents the irons from sticking to the surface of the article.

Cocoon Pie.

One and one-half cups grated cocoon and two eggs beaten slightly; add one cup sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, one cup of cream, one cup of milk; bake with one crust about 40 minutes in quick oven.

WHEN FEATHERS ARE NEEDED

Good Method of Preparing Them to Make the Most Comfortable of Mattresses.

Prepare a mixture of quicklime and water, one pound of quicklime to each gallon of water. The quantity of liquid needed will depend on the amount of feathers. Stir the quicklime in the water for fifteen minutes, and let stand till the lime falls to the bottom in a powder. Pour off the clear liquid. Put the feathers in a tub and pour the liquid over them, stirring them well together for some time to get the liquid thoroughly through them. After stirring, let the feathers fall to the bottom of the tub, when there should be at least three inches of the lime water over them. Let them stand in this water for three or four days, stirring them up once daily, then drain them well in a sieve, or a piece of coarse canvas stretched on supports. After this, wash and rinse them in clean water, drain them again, and once more spread them out to dry in any way that will allow of plenty of sun, air and light getting to, and through them. A warm, dry room should be chosen for the process. As soon as the feathers are perfectly dry, the mass must be well beaten and switched to free it from the white dust that will be found adhering to them. Some persons prefer when washing feathers to enclose them loosely in large bags of light material, such as mosquito netting or cheese cloth, as this makes them somewhat easier to handle.

WISE WORDS FOR THE COOK

Worth Reading, Though Most of the Older Housewives Will Be Familiar With Them.

White flour, browned in oven, should be kept on hand for thickening gravies. It insures rich, dark color.

Keep white potatoes in cool place, not frosty. Sprouts appear three times, never more. Break off all sprouts.

Sweet potatoes keep best in warm place, not cold. (Arguments?)

Fat obtained from pork, poultry, beef equals best lard for baking purposes.

Lamb fry should really include the sweetbread, but more often does not. Raising a lobster's "purse" (fringe by mouth) to find it spring back firmly is sign the lobster is fresh; purse moving flabbily, not so good an omen.

Four pounds of fish makes chowder for seven people; cost twenty cents if purchased at wholesale or sixty-four cents retail price.

Sweet marjoram, best of all herbs for seasoning, should be dried not too closely to heat, sifted finely, corked in airtight bottle.

Best soup meat is "shin" (leg fore). Tell retailers nineteen to twenty cents pound is unfair against seven to nine cents wholesale price.

Rennet Pudding. To one quart of sweet milk warmed a little add one and a half tablespoons of rennet, stir a few moments carefully and let stand in a cold place undisturbed for three hours. Serve in the same dish and eat with a little sugar and wine over it, or sweetened cream flavored with vanilla. Rennet can be bought in any first class grocery.

The best way to flavor with vanilla is to buy two of the best Mexican vanilla beans and put them in a quart jar filled with granulated sugar and keep tightly closed. Use the sugar instead of the extract of vanilla in making desserts that you wish to season and a delicate vanilla flavor is obtained. The jar can be refilled with sugar a number of times from the same beans.

East Indian Sauce. Chop fine a half-handful of green mint. Put into a bowl, add a little lemon juice and rub into a paste. Chop fine one large green pepper. Put into another bowl, add a little lemon juice and rub to a paste. Empty the bowl of mint into the bowl of green pepper. Put into another bowl, add salt-spoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of fine white sugar and more lemon juice until a thick green liquid is produced. Stir this constantly, then pour into a shallow dish and serve. This sauce must be served as green pepper, mix thoroughly, adding a piquancy will be lost. It is an excellent sauce for cold meats, fowl or game.

For Juicy Pies. The following hints are from a writer in the Delineator. The filling of pies sometimes presents difficulties. A very juicy filling soaks the undercrust. One remedy used for this is to bake the bottom crust before filling the pie; another is to brush it over with white of egg. The very best way to prevent the undercrust of a pie from being soggy is not to have one. Put the fruits into a fairly deep baking dish and cover with a flaky top crust. This is an English method which we would do well to follow.

Curried Potatoes. Melt two tablespoons of butter and mix in it a tablespoon of minced onion and one of curry powder, half spoon salt and a cup of hot milk. Boil five minutes. Strain over equal part of hot cooked potatoes.

Cabbage Salad. Use only "heart leaves," as the outer leaves will do to boll. Chop fine on platter. Trim edges with a sharp knife. Boil eggs and beets in salted water. Pour boiled dressing over all.

MAKE MOST OF STEAK

PROPER COOKING IS ESSENTIAL FOR ECONOMY.

Need Be Little Waste If the Housewife Knows How to Utilize the Leftovers—Always at Its Best When Broiled.

Some persons insist that beefsteak is cheap because it requires only a little heat to cook it and only a little time to prepare it. Moreover, it is appetizing and so is relished and eaten eagerly. A heavy stew, on the other hand—say these exponents of cheap beefsteak—costs little to begin with, if it is made from a cheap cut of meat. But it costs much in the heat required for long cooking and much in the housewife's time and energy in preparing and cooking it. If it is properly cooked it is, of course, appetizing. But it is easier to spoil a stew than a beefsteak in the cooking and so make it unsavory and so unappetizing that little of it is eaten.

Whether we agree with the person who argues that beefsteak is cheap or the one who argues that it is expensive, we must all agree with the one who argues that there are expensive ways of using beefsteaks and cheaper ways.

To begin with, the steak must be cooked to a turn. It should, to be at its best, be broiled. The degree of cooking must depend on the taste of the persons who are to eat it, but it should never be dried up in an effort to make it well done. If a well done steak is desired, it should be broiled over a fire hottest at the beginning of the cooking, and it should be frequently turned.

There is much so-called waste to steak—fat and gristle and bone. But all of this waste can be made useful. Hence a big steak is an economy, for the leftovers will be enough to be worth working over.

The leftover bits of the tender steak can be put through a meat chopper and, if the steak is cooked rare, formed into little balls and browned quickly in bacon fat or butter and served for lunch. If the steak is not rare the chopped bits can be mixed with an equal quantity of rice, a little white sauce and plenty of seasoning and then formed into small croquettes, dipped in egg and crumbs and browned.

The bone and gristle should go into the soup pot. If there are other scraps of meat and bones they can all be combined. If there are no others the steak bone and gristle can be put in a pot with a sliced onion, two diced carrots, two stalks of celery sliced, half a can of tomatoes, half a cupful of rice and three pints of water. This should be simmered until all the flavor is extracted from the bone and the vegetables—about an hour and a half—and then strained for soup.

The tough ends of the steak can be trimmed and cut into dice and stewed tender with a little canned tomato or diced green peppers and water. The stew should be slightly thickened when the meat is very tender.

Stuffed Mushrooms. Large mushrooms are best. Remove the stems and peel off the skin, being careful not to break the mushrooms. Place them in individual baking dishes or in one large dish, the stem side up to form little cups.

Now chop the stems fine. Use the same quantity of bread crumbs as you have of chopped stems; season with two drops Worcestershire sauce, salt, paprika and a little chopped parsley. Moisten with melted butter and carefully fill the cups with this mixture. Cover the bottom of baking dish with half water and half butter, a tablespoonful of each to which has been added a drop of onion juice and a drop of Worcestershire sauce. Bake in a moderate oven fifteen minutes or until the crumbs are brown and crisp on top.

Nut Cakes. Beat to a cream one cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, half tablespoon of grated nutmeg, two of grated chocolate, two well-beaten eggs, one cup of sweet milk, a pinch of salt, three-quarters of a cup of chopped walnut meat, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and enough sifted flour to form a soft dough; roll out with a ring and fry a golden brown in deep, hot lard. Drain on brown paper, and when cool roll in powdered sugar.

Fish Mash. Place pound of salt fish in dish on second cover of stove with cold water to cover. After it soaks a while change the water again and let it just steam, but not boll. About six or seven boiled potatoes. Chop all together and fry in pork fat till brown. Moisten a little with milk.

Pail Carrier. If a square piece of board about a foot across is fitted with casters at each corner it will be found a great help in scrubbing the floor, as the pail may be easily moved along instead of having to be lifted.

Food Kept Warm. A set of shelves above the radiator is useful in keeping food warm. The shelves should be fire skeleton racks, and attached to the wall by means of screw eyes over hooks. They are very handy and durable.

When Making Pea Soup. Always put a slice of bread into the kettle when cooking pea soup. It prevents the peas from sinking to the bottom and burning.

SPRAY FOR SAN JOSE SCALE

Lime and Sulphur, Without Salt, is Best and Safest Application—Can Be Done Any Time.

(By M. KELLEY.) I find that lime and sulphur without salt is the best and safest application for San Jose scale. It is also a general fungicide and the one best remedy for peach-leaf curl. Spraying can be done any time during the winter if the weather permits.

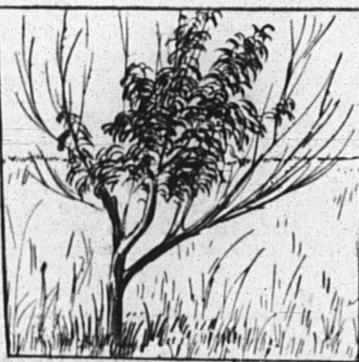

If much magnesia is present in the lime, boil longer than for lime—until a dirty green predominates. Try boiling one batch a long time and see whether the green color can be obtained.

If a green color can be obtained once it must every time in order to have good results from such lime. It is well to spray with a pressure of nearly 100 pounds for the best and most rapid work.

For small trees a calm day and one or two nozzles with a careful man back of them can finish the job with one application.

Medium sized trees will require two applications—one with a breeze from one point of the compass, the other a directly opposite breeze.

For the large and very large trees select windy days and a dozen or more nozzles. The strong wind will carry the hot spray up and through the trees, covering every twig, branch and limb from the top of the ground on at least two-thirds of their circumference. Work with an opposite wind when less will be required to finish the job.

Use extension whether spraying large or small trees and keep them turned always from the men and team that the spray will not blow upon them. Rods of different lengths and a good supply of nozzles should be at hand. Have stop cocks in the rods.

Old blankets for the horses, especially on the cold days, and old overcoats for the men will rob the job of some of its real unpleasant features.

KEEPING APPLES IN WINTER

Should Be Carefully Sorted Over and Perfect Specimens Wrapped in Paper Like Oranges.

If your apples are not headed up in barrels (a much better way than to keep them in open bins exposed to the air) sort over carefully and it will pay you to keep the most perfect ones by themselves. Wrap each in paper, as oranges are wrapped, and pack away in a box or barrel with a tight cover. You will be surprised at how greatly this little labor will improve the keeping qualities. Not only will the fruit thus packed keep longer without rotting, but the fresh texture and flavor will be more perfectly retained.

Some of the western orchardists are now packing apples for markets in this way with all the care that the orange grower exercises and no doubt very soon all choice fruit will be protected.

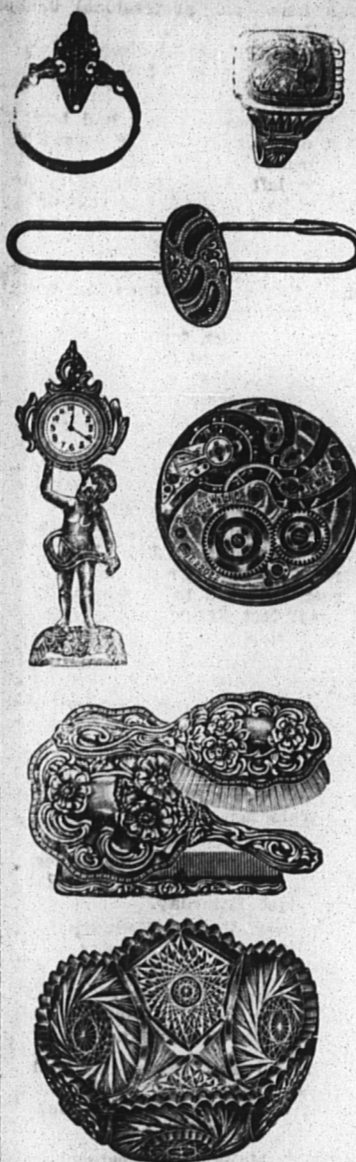

While the professional should take pride in wrapping each apple which he sells in a neat wrapper containing his name and address, ordinary newspaper will suffice for home use.

FRUIT BETTER THAN GRAIN

Provides Greater Amount of Work and Consequently Requires Larger Number of Helpers.

Much more food can be grown on an acre devoted to fruit than can be produced with any kind of grain, says Campbell's Farmer. Fruit growing also provides a greater amount of work and requires a larger number of helpers. To the extent that fruit growing is substituted for grain growing there will naturally be an increase of country farming population. This is what is the most needed to make land valuable.

The growing of grain makes the land poorer, especially where the grain is sold. Where fruit is grown the chief loss to the soil is in the mineral elements, and the sale of the fruit brings money to purchase these. Selling grain never returns enough to restore the fertility expended in growing.

SAYS SULPHUR IS SURE TO RELIEVE ITCHING ECZEMA

Get an ounce of bold-sulphur cream and heal skin eruptions right up

Any breaking out or irritation on the face, arms, legs or body when accompanied by itching, or when the skin is dry and feverish, can be readily overcome by applying a little bold-sulphur cream, says a noted dermatologist.

He informs us that bold-sulphur instantly allays the angry itching and irritation and soothes and heals the Eczema right up leaving the skin clear and smooth. Bold-sulphur has occupied a secure position for many years in the treatment of cutaneous disorders because of its parasite-destroying property. Nothing has ever been found to take its place in treating the irritable and inflammatory skin affections. While not always establishing a permanent cure it never fails to subdue the itching irritation and drive the Eczema away and it is often years later before any eruption again appears on the skin.

Those troubled should obtain at any pharmacy an ounce of bold-sulphur cream which is applied to the affected parts in the same manner as an ordinary cold cream. It isn't unpleasant and the prompt relief afforded, particularly in itching Eczema, proves very welcome.

LETCHER COUNTY.

Whitesburg, Ky., April 15.—Telegrams from Crowder, Okla., brought the intelligence here of the murder of James M. Bates, formerly of this county, who was killed there by J. W. Kelley, the postmaster at Crowder, owing to an old trouble. Bates was city marshal of Crowder. He was well and favorably known throughout Letcher county, being a son-in-law of Joe S. Adams, of Craftsville.

The April term of the Letcher Circuit Court convened here Monday with Judge John F. Butler, of Pikeville, presiding. Judge Butler's instructions to the grand jury were both forceful and pointed, especially along the lines of whiskey traffic and pistol toting—the root and branch of a large per cent of the murders today. There will be a large amount of business transacted at this term of the court—there being two interesting murder cases to be tried.

A few days ago William Jenkins, a farmer merchant, aged about 50, of Harlan county, came into the Big Cowan creek section below here and eloped with Miss Pearl Pendleton, aged about 18, and they eloped to Harlan the home of the groom-to-be where the ceremony took place. Despite parental objections the couple had been sweethearts for years, culminating in their elopement. Miss Pendleton was the beautiful daughter of William Pendleton, Big Cowan farmer.

A BUSINESS MAN OF MINNEAPOLIS

MR. E. M. TAYLOR,
No. 250 Nicollet St., Minneapolis, Minn.
"To-day I am in excellent health. Never felt better in my life. I am glad of this opportunity to say something to all men or women who suffer from dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I consider Peruna a great remedy. It is a godsend."

A new book of interest to all, sick or well, sent free by the Peruna Company.

Minneapolis is a city where they do things. Stimulated by a vigorous climate, surrounded by a fertile country, peopled by the best blood of the over crowded east, it is a city of hustle, of great achievements conceived and wrought out.

Mr. Taylor, of Minneapolis, Minn., is one of this sort of men. A newspaper man. A political worker. An Englishman by birth. He has been in this country nineteen years. He has resided in the northwest, Winnipeg, Fargo, and for the last ten years in Minneapolis.

Mr. Taylor is a friend of Peruna and does not conceal his friendship. He is thoroughly enthused with the belief that Peruna is a great remedy. He has a right to feel so. For several years he suffered with dyspepsia. This caused him to have very bad health.

Newspaper advertisements would never have influenced him to take Peruna. It was friends that persuaded him to try the remedy. In less than a week he needed no more persuasion. He saw that Peruna was doing him good. He is able to say in a letter to the Peruna Company.

"To-day I am in excellent health. Never felt better in my life. I am glad of this opportunity to say something to all men or women who suffer from dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I consider Peruna a great remedy. It is a godsend."
